

Economic Growth & Immigration: Bridging the Demographic Divide

AILF/IPC's new Special Report reveals how immigration is a critical source of labor force growth, particularly in less-skilled jobs not well matched to the educational level of native-born workers. Although an expanding labor force is essential for U.S. economic growth, present immigration policies remain largely unresponsive to this labor demand.