

How do I get a lawful permanent residence in the U.S.?

There are many ways to gain lawful permanent residence (LPR) in the United States. Five of the major ways is by entering the U.S. as a refugee, being granted political asylum, diversity visa lottery, employment petition and family petition. There are also other ways to get LPR status but it usually involves special immigration programs designated for nationals of certain countries.